PRESS RELEASE

This public event will mark the official launch of LAB, a think tank founded in 2005 by conceptual artist Adam Pendleton. Known for his text-based works that investigates the intersection of social space, identity and the visual manifestation of language in design, Pendleton will present a performance-lecture: LAB Lecture: about the language i use i'll use. Exploring his ideas about how LAB operates within the framework of contemporary art, Pendelton's performance will include his partially-improvised responses to projections of LAB documents. His lecture will be interspersed with protest songs, themselves framed as documents, by Woodie Guthrie and Phil Ochs sung by Kate Fenner. A panel discussion will follow with Adam Pendleton; Bartholomew Ryan, co-editor of LAB Magazine; Kate Fenner and graphic designer David Reinfurt of ORG inc.
